A superkey is a set of attributes that uniquely determines a tuple.

A candidate key is a superkey, none of whose proper subsets is a superkey.

{Name, Goals} is a superkey but not a candidate key if {Name} is a key.

A primary key is a designated candidate key.

When a relation schema has several candidate keys, usually better to choose a primary key with a single attribute or a small number of attributes.